Mills Named Interim President

Dr. Stephen Mills, founder of the Worcester Educational Development Foundation, has been named interim president of the organization.

Mills retired as Superintendent of the Acton-Boxboro Public Schools, was Deputy Superintendent of the Worcester Public Schools, and served on the Worcester School Committee. He is currently the director of the Center for Effective Instruction at Worcester State University.

Mills is a graduate of Burncoat High School, and his three adult children are Doherty alumni.

WEDF Adds New Donation Software to Website

WEDF recently added new software to the WEDF website to make it easier for on-line donors to designate support for a specific program.

WEDF supports eleven programs that benefit Worcester students, their parents, and teachers. On-line donations can also be made to a discretionary fund.

The Worcester Educational Development Foundation works collaboratively with the Worcester Public Schools and numerous for-profit and non-profit organizations to enrich the education of Worcester students.

Please join us in investing in our community's most precious resource - our children

22,000 students in grades 1 – 12 experience the region's culture through curriculum-based field trips.

2500 students get the winter clothes they need through Coats For Kids.

Hundreds of students get the college prep help they need through the Hanover Insurance funded AVID program – (Advancement Via Individual Determination)

Small classroom grants reward creative teaching and learning.

More students are learning with state-of-the-art technology.

150 sports teams have more equipment and better uniforms.

Students learn how to lead healthier lives.

Performing artists have the materials and instruments they need.

Through Books for Babies the parents of Worcester newborns receive literacy packets.
